Chamber of Commerce Committee Met the Officials.

SOME AGREEABLE NEWS PROMISED

Within the Next Two or Three Days The Road Will Come Into this City if the Wheeling People Want It. Doubt as to the Exclusive Contract of the Wheeling Company on the Steel Bridge-As to the Suspension.

On Saturday the committee from the chamber of commerce, appointed for the purpose of investigating the matter of the proposed entrance of the overthe-river electric street railway system into Wheeling, met and had a conference with Messrs. Leyds, Jolly and their colleagues at Bridgeport. An Ix-TELLIGENCER reporter saw one of the members of the committee last night and asked what there was that the public would like to know regarding the affair. The gentleman replied that as yet the committee is not ready to give anything out for publication, but that in two days, or at the latest in three days, they would be ready to say something to the public, which they think will be agreeable news. "The over-the-river line will probably come into Wheeling if the people here want the road." "How can this road get into Wheeling?" "Why, there are two bridges across the river, I believe."

"Yes, but hasn't the Wheeling company the exclusive right over the steel bridge?"

The Intelligencer's informant answered with an interrogatory remark, "Do you think a bridge company that is out for the stuff would tie itself up in that we ""

"How about the suspension bridge and the proposed additional pier on the Island end? Would that bridge then be suitable for electric railway traffic."

"I will have to refer you to the gentlemen who compose the company owning that bridge. I believe they are all shrewd business men."

A Caravan Escorts Two Shriners to the Train for Cincinnati.

Yesterday morning Shriners M. R. Wolff and E. E. Baldwin left to represent Osiris Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of this city, in the meeting of the Impealal Council of Shriners, which meets at Cincinnati. The sun was so hot that the shriners did not have to hot that the shriners did not have to light the fires in their furnace to produce the burning sands without which no true shriner is willing to journey. When the shriners of the temple brought out the camels gorgeously arrayed, and mounted by members wearing the red fez of the desert, a general impression prevailed that a menagerie had arrived unheralded and unknown, but inquiry unheralded and unknown, but inquiry brought the truth, and as the delegates reached their train and escaped from the almost suffocating jam of humanity and camels to the cool recesses of the parlor coach, they heaved a sign of re-lief. It was a fine escort—in fact it lief. It was a fine escort—in fact it was—literally out of sight, but the shriners made their chosen representatives each carry his own luggage, which largely consisted of water to refresh their parched tongues in crossing from oasis to oasis. oasis to oasis.
